

Additions to the Bibliography of Historical Archaeology in Australia

MICHAEL PEARSON

These additions to the bibliography compiled by Jane Wesson, which appeared in the first two volumes of this journal, have been compiled by Michael Pearson of the Australian Heritage Commission. The same problem of defining the field of historical archaeology has faced this bibliographer as faced the original compiler. The approach to this update of the bibliography has been to include recently published references, a range of earlier publications including some not strictly archaeological but directly relating to sites and matters of relevance to archaeologists, and a number of references to New Zealand publications and theses. In addition to this, a proportion of the entries are unpublished reports which are generally available only in the libraries of the departments or clients who commissioned them. These are included as they still constitute a major proportion of the documented historical archaeological work in Australia.

These additions to the bibliography include numerous recent publications and older but previously unlisted references. The major new areas included in this listing are unpublished reports, and references to New Zealand published and unpublished material.

The unpublished reports come from all states with the exception of Queensland, and represent almost a third of the contributions listed here. They are included as they represent a major part of the work being undertaken at the present time in Australia. While access to some of the reports may prove difficult for researchers, due to the reports being held in most cases only by the client or department which commissioned them, at least their identification here will alert others to the scope of the work being carried out around the country.

The New Zealand entries are included as they represent a body of work dealing with site types and topics highly relevant to the Australian scene.

The format of this bibliography is identical to the first two parts published in Volumes 1 and 2 of this journal, and the reference numbers used continue the sequence established in the earlier parts.

While it is not intended to continue this bibliography in the next number of the journal, readers are encouraged to forward their own publication and report lists to the editor, together with other references which have not been listed so far. These contributions may then be compiled into a further addition to the bibliography in a later volume of the journal.
